WOMAN MURDERS WOMAN

NEGRESS SMASHES RIVAL'S HEAD ON THE PAVEMENT.

Keeps on Pounding the Skull Against the Surface Until Victim Dies—Then Her Lover Dresses Her in Boy's Clothes and Starts Her South—He Is Under Arrest.

Policeman Gunn, who is regarded in the Mercer street station as a specialist on the personnel and habits of life of "Little Africa," as the district bounded by Macdougal street, Bleeker street, Sixth avenue, Carmine street and West Third street is known, brought news yesterday morning to the Jefferson Market court of another murder in Minetta lane.

Murders in Minetta lane are common enough, and are usually committed by a negro. What seemed peculiar to Gunn about this murder was that it was committed by a woman and was accomplished by pounding the head of a much larger woman upon the concrete pavement of the lane. And what seemed more peculiar to the policeman was that the murderers escaped.

According to the story the policeman told in court Sally Ubanks, who is known in the neighborhood as Kid Ubanks, on account of her close cropped kinky hair and her ability in handling her fists, had a row on the previous night with Dora Page, a 212 pound colored woman, outside the latter's house at 20 Minetta lane. The trouble arose because Joe Callamore, a lover of Sally's, had recently been paying attention to the Pope woman. Witnesses of the assault told the police that after an argument that aroused the whole neighborhood Sally, who weighs about 125 pounds, closed in on her opponent and knocked her down. She then, the witnesses said, jumped upon the fallen woman and pounded her head upon the sidewalk until the prostrate woman ceased to struggle.

Policeman Dunn came on the run. He found the woman in a hallway. The ambulance doctor said she was dead. None of the crowd around the doorway could tell Dunn anything of the murder. Policeman Gunn was sent with Detective Murphy to help Dunn in his search. After half an hour's search Gunn learned that Sally had run away to a drug store after the murder and had telephoned to Joe Callamore that she was in trouble. Callamore came, the witness said, and dressed her up in boy's clothes and then he crossed to the street. City. There, the policeman said, Callamore shipped her on a train for North Carolina. Scarcely more than an hour after the murder police authorities along the route of the train supposed to be taken by Sally were looking for her. Callamore was arrested and held in $1,000 bail for examination to-day on the charge of aiding in the escape of a person who had committed a felony.

COP CAUGHT BOY BURGLAR.

Letter Said He Stole for His Destitute Mother, Which Was True.

Seventeen-year-old Frank Dietrich, whose widowed mother lives at 141 Throop avenue, Williamsburg, was detected early yesterday morning robbing the souvenir postal card store of the firm of Schwartz Bros. & H. Cohen at 15 Thornton street.

Policeman Carpenter of the Clymer street station saw the flicker of a light in the store and when he got there Dietrich, who it was alleged had forced open the front door, was just emerging with a bundle containing 1,000 fancy cards. When Dietrich saw the cop he took to his heels and the store and tried to escape, but Carpenter caught him.

At the police station Dietrich began to cry and said he was tempted to steal by the poverty-stricken condition of his mother. He added that his first thieving exploit and that his intention was to sell the postal cards at Coney Island to-day in order to help his parent.

The police investigated the story told by the boy and found it was untrue. His mother was not destitute and had seven other children, several of whom work. Mrs. Dietrich told the police that on Friday night her son had kissed her good-night and had gone to his room. She said that he must have gotten up some time during the night to carry out the robbery. The police held him on a charge of burglary and when he was arraigned in the Lee avenue police court he had nothing to say. In default of bail he was remanded pending a hearing.

WILL SAVE THE DARIEN.

Steamship Stranded on Verde Island for Six Months Will Be Rescued.

NEW ORLEANS, July 13.—The Darien of the Leyland Steamship Line, which has been aground on Verde Island, Colombia, for more than six months will be saved, according to those who went to her rescue. The Darien was en route to New Orleans last January when she was struck by a gale which swept her ashore. The salvage work was undertaken from Liverpool and by dredging a channel from the bank on which the steamer was stranded she was hauled to the ocean in April last and just as she reached deep water another gale swept her back again. There she has remained ever since, with crew and cargo intact. The vessel is brand new and the cargo very valuable.
